TRIBUTE TO GENERAL HANCOCK, -Among the speakers at the Hancick ratification meeting at Warrenton, was General William H. Payre. In a synopsis of the General's speech the Warrenton Index says:

"General Payne related an incident, personal to himself which illustrated how entirely Gen. Hancock sought to end the war and soften its bardships to its victims. He described the scope when his house in Warrenton was surrounded at dead of night after Liceola's assissination, in violation of the terms of capitula tion at Appemant x, and how he was dragged to Fairfix Court House, though but recently badly wounded, and locked up in jail with Federal deserters. All the property he then had in the world, consisting of herses and equipments, were taken from him and his aid, and from thence he was burried to Washington city, where, with four companies, he was hounded through the streets by an infuriated mob who supposed the prisoner had some connection with the assassing ion. From Washington be was transferred in May to Johnson's Island and supplied with the unpleasant information that he would be held for amnesty. Whilst there every effort was made for his re lease by interesting some one of influence in his Gen. Gract was addressed by Gen. Lac Henry Winter Davis was approached through a relative of his wife; and appeals were made to Secretary Stanton and others in authority. But no one could be induced to concern himself in the matter. At length Gen. Payne addressed a letter to Gen. Hancock. The reply was an instant order for his release on the parole granted the Confederate army; and, better still, an order for the restoration of all property taken from him. On his return home, in June, he found awaiting his call his own as well as his aid's awaiting his call his own as well as his aid's horses and all their equipments, except a sword especially valued for the inscription upon it. That tword we appropriated by an efficer sitting upon the trial of Mrs. Surratt and was being worn by him. In a short time that, too, was returned to him, and will be handed down to his children's children. The audierce could well understand that in the generosity, the justice, and the soldier like conduct of General that could be a comparatively trifling metter. Hancock in this comparatively trifling matter the speaker record zad a noble and magnani-mous spirit and why he should have had a weakness for Gen. Hancock over since its or currenee. He regarded the incident as typical of the man-the next President of the United
